if prevention is better than cure why isn t policy more preventive policymakers only have the ability to pay attention to and influence a tiny proportion of their responsibilities and they engage in a policymaking environment of which they have limited understanding and even less control this simple insight helps explain the gap between stated policymaker expectations and actual policy outcomes why isn t government policy more preventive uses these insights to produce new empirical studies of wicked problems with practical lessons the authors find that the uk and scottish governments both use a simple idiom prevention is better than cure to sell a package of profound changes to policy and policymaking taken at face value this focus on prevention policy seems like an idea whose time has come yet prevention is too ambiguous until governments give it meaning no government has found a way to turn this vague aim into a set of detailed consistent and defensible policies this book examines what happens when governments make commitments without knowing how to deliver them it compares their policymaking contexts roles and responsibilities policy styles language commitments and outcomes in several cross cutting policy areas including health families justice and employability to make sense of their experiences the book uses multiple insights from policy theory to help research and analyse the results the results help policymakers reflect on how to avoid a cycle of optimism and despair when trying to solve problems that their predecessors did not some engage in high risk behaviors others need help with emotional skills many are affected by mental disorders while every school has its share of students needing comprehensive mental health services personnel struggle to address these needs effectively in an era of scarce resources and dwindling budgets preventive mental health at school gives school based practitioners and researchers an accessible nuanced guide to implementing and improving real world proactive programs and replacing outmoded service models based firmly in systems thinking and an ecological public health approach the book outlines the skills needed for choosing evidence based interventions that are appropriate for all students and for coordinating prevention efforts among staff educators and administration as schools become more and more diverse school based practitioners must become knowledgeable in regard to the critical racial and cultural differences that affect students their families and enrich our schools research currently available to help meet the needs of various groups of children and their families is included as each topic is addressed in addition the author provides a theoretical groundwork and walks readers through the details of assessing resources and needs applying knowledge to practice and evaluating progress instructive case examples show these processes in action and further chapters address questions of adapting programs already in place for greater developmental or cultural appropriateness included in the coverage student engagement motivation and active learning engaging families through school and family partnerships evidence based prevention of internalizing disorders social emotional learning adapting programs for various racial and ethnic populations adapting programs for young children preventive mental health at school offers solid guidance and transformative tools to researchers graduate students and professionals practitioners clinicians in varied fields including clinical child and school psychology social work public health and policy educational policy and politics and pediatrics
